WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Quick hitting Pacific trough will move over the area this afternoon and evening. Rainfall will be light and impact the northwest third of the region. Amounts will be a quarter of an inch or less favoring the North Coast. Wind speeds will generally be light today. A drier and warmer trend setting up for the Wednesday through Friday period. Temperatures will generally be near to a little above normal. Wind speeds overall will be on the lighter side although some stronger N to NE winds with peak gusts to 30 mph will impact the Sacramento Valley on Wednesday. A stronger Pacific low will approach the region on Saturday. The approach will invoke a moist, gusty southerly flow with precipitation spreading from west to east during the weekend with lasting impacts into early next week. Gusty N to NE winds would follow the system passage early next week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

***Gusty offshore winds across Southern California this morning***

Weak surface high pressure over the Great Basin will bring local northeast to east winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph to the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California this morning. A weak ridge of high pressure aloft will cause temperatures to be around 5 degrees above normal through Saturday, with upper 40s and 50s across the mountains, 60s to low 70s in the Central California Valleys, and 70s to low 80s in the Southern California Valleys. Minimum humidity will be mainly in the teens across Southern California and above 20% across Central California through Saturday. Light offshore winds will occur this afternoon through Friday and then there will be light southerly winds on Saturday. A Pacific trough will bring significant cooling Sunday and Monday and depending on its exact track, showers may be possible.
